

Beaded necklaces design-unite varied glass beads in one charm necklace

This charm necklace is pretty stunning and astonishing-throwing lots of glass beads on a table and attaching randomly to a chain for one piece of charm necklace. It's actually a fabulous work.

In association with various beads and chains, you can explore lots of individual beaded necklaces patterns. Assembling components side by side, at random, offers amazingly beautiful and cool combinations that one would not ever think of. For this charm necklace, you'll try the mix of Bicone, Abacus, Faceted-round and cube glass beads.

Supplies needed in the charm necklace:

- Glass bead
(Bicone, Abacus, Faceted-round & Cube)
- Brass Chain
- Golden headpin
- Jumpring (or 0.3mm brass wire instead)
- Wire-cutter Plier
- Side Cutting Plier
- Round Nose Plier

Instructions for beaded necklaces:

Step1: preparations for decorative elements

1. Figure out the needed length of larger loops chain, it is where you'll hang on the glass bead components for main adornment in your charm necklace. After that, snip the segment with plier;

2. Slide beads of your choice onto the proper headpins and loop the other end by round nose plier;

3. In my project, blue is my main color palette. The lighter color ones serve as a foil for focal dark blue ones.

Step2: hook all the well-prepared components to chain

1. Start from the second link on your chain, in each supply about 6~7 pieces of glass bead components;

2. Vary the shapes and colors comply with the rule that may ensure the focal effect for dark blue beads.

Step3: add on the chain

1. After finishing the main beaded part, I simply choose three strands of chains for complement the rest of the charm necklace;

2. Cut off about a 10cm long brass wire strand and string the three chain strips and then the beginning link on larger chain. Twist the wire for several times and then wrap the rest of it around the chain bunches;

3. Do repeat the same processes for another side

Voila! Though this charm necklace consists of such large amount of glass beads, with different colors and different shapes, the final proves they come together in a well balance and deliberately simple design. It deserves the best of any beaded necklaces! Love it!

For more enchanting DIY jewelry making ideas, please head over to:

<http://www.pandahall.com/learning-center/category-Inspiration-Projects-3.html>